The world is facing with population outbursts and its consequences. Whereas on one side it is a boon on other side it proves a curse. The perception of the population remains purely upon the positioning of that country as the developed, undeveloped or the developing countries. As if the problems were less, the pandemic added itself to the list of crisis and people kept suffering. Whether individual, society or nation; whether physical, mental, emotional, social, political, economical, or spiritual, people across the globe are undergoing some or the other crisis. Nevertheless, most of the people are suffering existential crisis. But still the show goes on with the hope of a better future ahead. Not restricting to this, there are several other demographics as such the gender, age, SES, caste, religion, province, nationality which in most cases serve as a cause of new problems. The power of these demographics can't be undermined, for, the same demographics especially the gender, caste, province and religion in several cases serve as an identity for an individual. Not withstanding to these demographics are the profession that serves as an identity for the individuals maybe professor, teacher, doctor, lawyer etc. These and many more are the identities of the individuals. Yet the fact remains that although we have so many identities, our dreams are far from reality. Our cultural systems sometimes seem to be crashing down, social engineering turning chaotic... Maintaining communal harmony is facing huge challenge and so on... With this background, it becomes very important to answer the question that has remained unanswered - How should we be identified? This international conference to be held in first week of December is focused to elaborate on identity - its formation, development, transformation and crisis.
